Psalm 37:24

Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down;
For the Lord upholds him with His hand.

I like this! The statement, though he fall, lets us know that God = expects us to stumble and fall from time to time. See, God doesn't plan = to throw us away when we fall like we do each other. We throw each other = away when we find out sin on someone. God does not do this, religious = men do this. God declared that this good man would not be utterly cast = down. He might go down for awhile, but I will not forsake him. God went = one step further than a religious man and said, "I will uphold this = fallen good man with my hand." He told us to do the same thing in = Galatians 6:1, but so many people ignore it. Notice how this good man = falls into the hands of God when he is sinning.=20

Here's the deal. When God sees good people repent of their sins and = actually try to live right He marks them. He marks them as His very own = children. He, in essence, takes them to raise. It's a lifelong process = of attempts to live right with some failures along the way. I would like = to reference you to this web page concerning failure: = <http://www.cableone.net/bosullivan/Failure.htm> None of this makes = excuses to sin. All sin must be punished by death and shall be. Sin is = serious business in God's eyes. We have only one way to handle sin in = our lives, it's found in Proverbs 24:16 For a righteous man may fall = seven times and rise again, But the wicked shall fall by calamity.

We must rise again after each fall! The righteous man does not have to = fall. It says he may fall seven times. If he does fall he must rise = again. To rise again is to get up off the ground, dust oneself off, = strap the boots back on, repent of the sin, get deliverance from the sin = (through Christ), and continue the journey ahead.=20

Bo Sullivan
